Devon County Council's (DCC) ongoing support for the Exeter Respect festival highlights our commitment to fostering acceptance and inclusion. This year, when we are seeing increasing political polarisation across the world, Exeter Respect, which brings together so many people and groups from different communities across the county, feels more relevant than ever.

We are looking forward to the great mix of music and dance, colours, flavours and conversations that make up Exeter Respect, one of the largest, and longest running, celebrations of diversity in the South West.

We've got a large space at the festival this year and staff from a wide range of teams and departments will be here over the weekend, including staff from Migration and Resettlement, Public Health, EDI (Equality, Diversity and Inclusion) and Learn Devon. Please come and visit us to find out more about the different strands of Devon County Council's work, or just to have a chat.

WELCOME TO EXETER RESPECT FESTIVAL 2025

Celebrating Peace and Harmony Between Communities

In Memory of Dr Anil Lee

Exeter Respect Festival 2025 will mark the 28th anniversary of the first Respect Festival in Exeter, aimed at bringing communities together to celebrate their differences and commonalities. This year our theme for 2025 is 'Peace and Harmony Between Communities'. This year's festival is in memory of Dr Anil Lee who was a precious member of Exeter Respect Festival's Board of Directors. Her legacy will live on and her hard work for all communities will be noted and resonate in our lives. Anil has touched the lives of many in Exeter and in Devon and was an amazingly great believer in harmony between communities.

It is so important to express our commitment to diversity; bringing all communities together to celebrate their friendship, peace and harmony, to allow us to live in a society free from prejudice, discrimination and racism.

The 2025 festival will be bigger and better than ever, running from Saturday 7th June to Sunday 8th June in Belmont Park, Exeter. On Saturday 7th June at 11:00 Street Heat Samba start the celebrations with a bang with their joyful rhythms, doors open to the public at 11am to join the colourful procession. Acts perform from midday to 7pm, and from 11am to 6:15pm on Sunday.

On the Mandela Stage we look forward to showcasing UK based international reggae recording artist Da Fuchaman from St Jamaica and his band Fire Blaze who will perform on Saturday. Sunday's headliner is Exeter's inspirational Soul of the City Gospel Choir, backed by their live gospel house band.

There will also be the Community Stage, full of exciting performances from talent hidden in our community, showcasing their cultural diversity. We are delighted that once again Exeter College will host the Stephen Lawrence Diversity Stage for young people and artists from the community. If you wish to show your own talent join in with our Anil Lee Open Mic.

Our outdoor stages will provide a kaleidoscope of performances from distinguished stars to local talent.

There will be many outdoor processions and activities, plus familiar opportunities for visitors to sample the wealth of stalls providing everything from global food to fine clothing and handmade crafts, plus information about local communities and organisations, all delivered with a very genuine smile.

Unfair visa rules are trapping thousands of migrant health and care workers in unsafe jobs. Under Tier 2 rules, workers are tied to a single employer, leaving them vulnerable to exploitation and afraid to speak out.

But change is on the horizon.

A powerful proposal is now in Parliament calling for a Certificate of Common Sponsorship. This vital reform would give workers the freedom to change jobs without losing their visa.

Migrant workers deserve rights, respect and real choice.

Write to your MP today asking them to back the change.
